

Somewhere in England
Sunday August 14,

My Sweet:

Sunday morning again and I'm just before going to church. you haven't raised your pretty little head as yet.
Did you have a good time last nite? I wish we could have a good ole Saturday nite like we used to have.

I was in London on pass last week.
Mac + Ray were with me of course. We had a lot of fun taking in the sites. of course we couldn't see all of them & don't guess we ever will but we made as many as we could.

We saw the changing of the King's Guard at Buckingham Palace and what a site that was. Some of the finest military drill I have ever seen.

We walked through Westminster Abbey. I'm sorry very sorry that we didn't have enough time to visit a little longer in the Abbey. It is such a beautiful place and one can spend hours taking it all in. From the Abbey we walked along the Thames passed Big Ben to Waterloo Bridge. Later on in the afternoon we went down to Piccadilly Square and bought tickets to "Lionel Lincoln", a musical play now running in London. We had tea and cake at four of course and went to the show at 5.45. Shows start early over here since the war began. It was a very good show and the music in it was wonderful. It was like one you would see in America and Mac & I (Partridge didn't take in the show) enjoyed every minute of it.

After the show we had supper and went into a Pub (Bar) for a brew or two. By then it was dark and London at night is very dark, but there was a big moon shining. We walked back to the Thames past Waterloo Bridge and took a cab to the Officer's Club for a midnight snack.

The moon on the Thames made me a bit homesick in fact I must say I missed you like hell.

I hope to get back to London soon.
I do like the place and for that matter I like every part of England I've seen. Of course it isn't like Galveston on moonlight nights and the Pubs can't compare with the Wat, but still I like it.

I saw Don Ameche and Joan Bennett in "Girl Trouble" last nite. It's a little old I know but I missed it in the States and it was fair.

Of course it is too soon to be expecting mail from you but I would like to hear from you. Answer as soon as you can because it takes a long time to get a very long time.

I guess that's about all for now so I will close. Tell everyone hello for me. Tell Ben and Harley too if you get a chance. I wish I could hear from those two. I'm anxious to hear how they are doing.

Love

Bill
