

April 8.
England:

Hello Sweetheart:

I'll be around tomorrow about 0900 and pick you up for church. After church I think it would be fun if the gang went down to Clear Lake for a good "old time picnic" with fried chicken and everything. Then on the way back tomorrow night there may even be a moon in fact there will be one for sure - - - - - excuse please but that is just a day dream of a soldier in the E.T.O. whose heart is some place else.

I've written you a couple of v-mails the past few days. I hope you received them. I know you don't like them so very well, but they say they are going thru pretty fast these days.

I would like to see you in your Easter bonnet tomorrow and how does it go I'd be the proudest fellow in the Easter Parade.

I went into town last night to see "This Is The Army". It was the second time for me but I enjoyed the music again just the same!

I was talking to Bill Ryan today. He had just received a letter from his mom and she told him that Shirley Pierce had a little one. Can ya beat it I didn't even remember her being ~~was~~ married.

I received a letter from Zaid today when he wrote the letter he had done sixteen and he said he was still coming back for more. He is now a First Louie too.

I'm send mom some pictures that I took in [redacted]. I've found out also how I can get view service on the processing of film so I will be taking some more pretty quick.

How is old Pop doing now I guess he has already transferred by now. I only owe him about 200 letters. If you have his new address how bout sending it along in your next letter.

I must say I'm sorry again for the long time between letters. I hope the

V. mail fills in the ³ space a little anyway.

We will have Easter services here on the Post tomorrow, I guess I'll go to them. I would like to attend the Sunrise Service in Hyde Park, London.

Well, sweet, I guess I'll quit for now. I hope you have a happy Easter and tell your ~~mom~~ Dad I wish them the same. I know it is late but I still have about twelve hours. Next year thing will be different I know.

Love.

Bill
